Level Contributor 15 posts 1 review Private Guide Guide Guide in Chiang Mai for a day trip, how many? 9 years ago hi myself & my partner would like to hire a guide & vehicle for a day trip to the hill tribal areas around Chiang Mai. We will be in Chiang mai the 1st week of February, we are quoted wildly changing quotes! Any guidance & advice would be greatly appreciated. Thanks to Joe Level Contributor 10,589 posts 57 reviews 121 useful votes 1. Re: Private guide in Chiang Mai for a day trip, how much? 9 years ago Hi Joe, this is a hard to answer (as you have discovered) - the price varies really greatly guide to guide. It depends on many things like distance, the type of vehicle you need and the qualifications of the guide (i.e. driver or license guide). It depends on what is included in the price. Some guides will include access rights and meals - some will just quote you on their time and vehicle. So, it's very hard to give you a grade as it varies so much. I would get a few quotes and check what is and isn't included and then make your decision from there. Caroline. Level Contributor 276 posts 47 reviews 39 useful votes 2. Re: Private guide in Chiang Mai for a day trip, how much? 9 years ago We have quotes range by up to $200Aus! For us taveling in July as a family of 5 we found Mr Joy the cheapest of the highly recommended drivers listed on the forum. 3. Re: Private guide in Chiang Mai for a day trip, how much? 9 years ago We also use Joy next week. Have not been to Chiang Mai, but booked via email. He was very quick to respond to all my questions and very helpful. Hopefully it will be just as good on the tours. There are 7 of us in our group so via mini van. Re: Private guide in Chiang Mai for a day trip, how much? 9 years ago Thank you all for your suggestions & Caroline I hope you & yours are safe & safe in these terrible times in your part of the world. I have given your advice on here invaluable on numerous occasions and you and your fellow Brisbaners are in our thoughts and prayers at this terrible time. Re: Private guide in Chiang Mai for a day trip, how much? 9 years ago Thanks Jo - It's been a pretty tough week here in Brisbane and surrounds. Our house didn't flood, but suburbs around us did. The recovery is going to take a long time. Thanks for the thoughts. Caroline. Level Contributor 11 posts 9 reviews 14 useful votes 6. Re: Private guide in Chiang Mai for a day trip, how much? 9 years ago Hello there, while we were in Chiang Mai last year we met a great driver/guide. He was in the army and was sly stallone's bodyguard. His name is Raynaldo (Ray) and speaks very very good English, was honest, reliable, knowledgeable and I (20 something girl & boyfriend) felt very very safe with him. He took us to all the interesting tourist places omitted all the places where they try to light you off. He got us in many places much much cheaper than the listed entrance fee and it was all part of his daily expenses. Because he was friends with most of the places we went, we got behind the scenes action and things like private time with elephants and stuff like that. he bought lunch for us every day, his taxi was a very nice new luxury vehicle, with great air con. He had cold bottles of water for us to drink throughout the day. When our camera ran out of battery, he pulled out his and took pictures for us, and he emailed them to us the next day. he tells great stories and is very reasonable in price. I can't remember exactly how much he was, but I remember thinking it was much much cheaper than the same tours with a larger company. We saw those in the same places we were, but they were crammed into an old rickety bus with no air con! His details are, Ray raynaldo22@hotmail.com let me know if you have any questions, and I'll do my best to help. 1 item 7. Re: Private guide in Chiang Mai for a day trip, how much? 9 years ago Hello, we only had a week to explore Chiang Mai so having his own guide really paid off. It's true that the price depends on what you want to see and do, but this article can help you figure out what activities you should get a guide for, and which you might want to try on your own :). Plus it mentions a TAT licensed company. weescribble.com/travel-menu/98-naturally-spe... I recommend the elephant camp most of all. Cheers! Level Contributor 7 posts 3 reviews 3 useful votes 8. Re: Private guide in Chiang Mai for a day trip, how much? 9 years ago There are many very commercial agencies in Chiangmai, if you want to go on a good trip and look less commercial and high quality then from first many good company no body knows! 9. This is one of the most visited cities in Thailand for travelers of all kinds! Whether you want to backpack Chaing Mai, visit on a budget or enjoy the luxury hotels here, you'll find Chiang Mai full of culture, friendly locals, incredible food markets, dozens of beautiful temples, a relaxed atmosphere, beautiful landscapes. It has even become something of the new place for expats and digital nomads in recent years. You will find many delicious Western food, cafes and bars throughout the city, but despite that, the old Thai-ness of the city has not gone away and a visit here will delight you. Make sure you budget extra time when you visit Chiang Mai and if it's easy stuck here. Many people plan to stay for a few days and end up staying for a few weeks or more! There's just a magic to this town. This travel guide to Chiang Mai can help you plan your trip, eat well and save money!1. Visit the Elephant Nature Park Elephant Nature Park rescues battered and injured elephants from around the country. It's a haven for them (and a lot of dogs and cats). You come to visit one day or volunteer for a week. It's a phenomenal day trip, gives back to the community, and lets you help these beautiful animals. A one-day visit starts at 2,500 THB ($75 USD).2. Tour all the temples Located in the old area of the city and around the wall are many beautiful Buddhist temples. The city is filled with temples, some dating as far back as the 13th century. The main ones worth watching are Wat Chiang Man, Wat Phra Singh, Wat Suan Dok, Wat Chedi Luang, and Wat Jet Yot.3. Visit Wat Doi Suthep Doi Suthep is the most famous temple of Chiang Mai. The pagoda probably contains relics of Buddha himself. It offers stunning views of the area and, at 6pm every day, you watch the monks sing. The temple can be reached by climbing a steep staircase of 304 steps (although, you also take a cable car up).4. Bargain on the night bazaar Chiang Mai is the main craft center of Thailand and the night bazaar is the largest in the country. Everything is sold at non-fixed prices, and you negotiate fight to your death. If you are planning to do some shopping in Thailand, this night bazaar will be where you can find the best deals. Open 6-12pm.5. Celebrate the Yi Peng Festival This annual festival takes place in November. Citizens leave thousands of paper lanterns in the sky, symbolically carrying dreams and wishes to the sky. The is a wonderful, memorable experience. If you are looking for an adrenaline rush, go zip lining. Chiang Mai has many operators offering beginner and advanced zip lining courses. The two operators are Flight of the Gibbon and Eagle Trekkers.2. Go jungle trekkingThis city is the main starting point for all kinds of jungle trekking tours. I love the three-day ones the best, but the longer the tour, the more interesting and secluded places you visit. Be careful who you sign up with, as many guides just walk with you and don't tell you much about land or wildlife. In addition, if you visit a tribal village, make sure that the money stays with the villagers, and that they are not exploited, which happens a lot here!3. Take a cooking classChiang Mai is the most popular place in Thailand for cooking classes, with a wide variety of lessons and great deals. You'll start your class by going to the market and learning about Thai produce before heading back to the kitchen to cook a few dishes and lots of food. Class prices range from 800-1,000 THB ($25-30 USD).4. Eat a cany dinnerExperience both the Northern Thai food and culture at the same time. At this event, visitors sit on the floor around a circular tray laden with northern dishes, and eat while watching traditional Thai and northern dances and hill tribe culture shows.5. Cruise the river cruise along rural Mae Ping on a two-hour journey that takes you past the beautiful scenery in the heart of Chiang Mai. Enjoy the pleasant pace of the boat. Stop to visit a local farm and its herb and fruit gardens - or relax and take a Thai dinner on board. It costs 240 THB ($8 USD) for one way, 450 THB ($14 USD) for a return.6. Chat with monksMonk chats are an opportunity for visitors to learn about the country's religion and culture and for monks a chance to practice English. It is a popular cultural activity that takes place on Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays from 1pm to 3pm at Wat Dok Suthep in the city.7. Go whitewater raftingIt is possible to go whitewater rafting on the Maeteng River. Rapids range from levels two to four and are at their most intense during the rainy season, August-October. Tours start at 1,800 THB ($55 USD).8. Shop at Warorot MarketIf your nights are already fully booked, consider visiting this popular market during the day. Located near the river, it is open daily until 6pm. This is a great place to shop for clothes and get some really cheap food.9. Chiang Mai Zoo and AquariumIn the 1950 Harold Mason Young, son of American missionaries, began rescuing and caring for injured animals, and his collection began getting visitors. Hence the birth of the zoo, when the Chiang Mai government donated 24 acres to help in its efforts. The zoo has grown to more than 200 acres now, and houses a wide variety of animals, and features two aquariums. The marine aquarium is the largest in and they also have one of the very rare giant pandas that are born in captivity. Admission is 500 THB ($15 USD).10. Visit the Tribal MuseumHighlighting Thailand's minority hill tribes, this ethnographic museum offers exhibits ranging from tribal clothing and jewelry items, videos about tribal tribal and outdoor gardens that model reconstructed tribal huts. Once a month there is also a tribal market with people selling handmade goods. Open Monday to Friday 9am-4.11pm. Spend time in Documentary Arts AsiaThis gallery space usually brings exhibitions related to humanitarian and activist materials, focusing on the plight of the Burma refugees and the minority hill tribes. If you are looking to inform yourself more about these efforts, this space is usually showing documentaries and artwork, and also offers a library. It's a great resource to learn about the region's historical and political contexts.12. Climb the Bua Thong Sticky FallsWhile a little out of town, this makes for a great day trip. The waterfalls, due to the type of limestone along the waterfall, produces an almost stickiness - allowing you to climb onto the cascading water! You feel a bit like Spiderman - not going to lie. The rocks themselves are interesting, looking a bit like fluffy clouds. Not only is it a neat experience, it's also a great workout! Pack a picnic, find a spot and hang out for lunch. (Hey there! Hang on! Did you know that I also wrote a whole guide to Thailand filled with - not only even more detailed information about the things on this page, but also routes, maps, practical information (i.e. opening hours, phone numbers, websites, prices, etc), cultural insights, and much more? It has everything you want in a guide - but with a focus on budget and cultural travel! If you want to go into more depth and bring something on your trip, click here for more information about the book!) Hostel prices - Hostels start at about 100 THB ($3 USD) range for a large 10-person dorm. Smaller dormitories (6 people) start around 120 THB ($3.60 USD). The more popular, centrally located hostels (most of which are free breakfast and air-conditioned) are about 300 THB ($4 USD) for a 4-6 bed dormitory. Private rooms in this same type of hostels start at 800 THB ($25 USD), but can be found throughout the city for as low as 350 THB ($11 USD) for a double room with an ensuite throughout the city. Guesthouses are also an option and start around 200 THB ($6 USD) per night. Budget hotel prices - Centrally located two-star hotels start at 400 THB ($12 USD) per night, and go up from there for a room with free WiFi, hot water, a comfortable bed, and air conditioning. On Airbnb, you'll find a large number of shared rooms in apartments for 350 THB ($100 USD). There is also a wide selection of whole apartments or residences ranging from 1,000-1,750 THB ($30-55 USD) per night. Average cost of food - Chiang Mai has some of the best street food in Thailand, and dishes cost 25-50 THB ($ USD). Most restaurant meals cost about 80 THB ($2.50 USD) for a main course and a drink. Western food starts at 170 THB ($5 USD) and goes from there. When it comes to drinking, going to bars can be pricey with the cheapest beers about 60 THB ($2 USD) each and cocktails sometimes cost double or triple that. Whereas actually buying beers from 7-Eleven to drink on the street can be 30 THB ($1 USD) per can. Dada Kafe, Sushi Ichiban, Dash, the Chaing Mai Gate Market and Sunday Market are all foodie spots you can't miss! How much does it cost to visit Chiang Mai? On a backpacking budget, all you have to spend is 900-985 THB ($25-30 USD) per day. This is a suggested budget assuming you are staying in a hostel, eating out a bit, cooking most of your meals or eating cheap street food, and using local transportation. On a mid-range budget, expect to pay 985-1,645 THB ($30-50 USD) per day. With this budget you might be able to fly between some destinations, eat more delicious seafood dinners and international meals, more tours and activities, sleep in air-conditioned rooms, and drink more. If you are looking to stay in Western hotels or expensive resorts, eat mostly Western food or in tourist areas, drink a lot, do lots of tours, and fly a lot, you need to budget for over 3,270 THB ($100 USD) per day. After that, the sky is the limit. Chiang Mai can be as cheap or expensive as you like (like most of Thailand). But if you hold the local markets; avoid the fancy organic, health restaurants that have popped up; and stay in the old town, you can easily save money! Here are some ways to save money in Chiang Mai: Bargain hard - In all markets here, you have to negotiate hard. Don't take first prize and don't be afraid to walk away. They blow up the prices hugely here since Chiang Mai is such a popular shopping destination for tourists. Food from the street stalls - Food from street vendors in Thailand is one of the best Thai food I have ever had and so cheap it is ridiculous. You can easily have a bowl of noodle soup, pad Thai or fried rice for 30 THB ($1 USD). The locals eat here, you have to eat here. Not only is it the best food around, it's the cheapest! Take the songthaew - At 20 THB ($0.60 USD) for anywhere in the city, this is the cheapest way to make ends meet (other than hiking). They go everywhere and run all night. There's no reason to take a cab in town. Couchsurf - Nothing is cheaper than free sleep. Couchsurfing connects you with the locals who not only give you a free place to stay, but also a local guide who can introduce you to all the great places to see. Book group excursions - When booking your day tours, multi-day tours, cooking classes, etc try to book ask a group so that the price per person is reduced. Travel alone? Make friends to book a tour with in your hostel. (Hey there! Hang on! Did you know that I also wrote a whole guide to Thailand filled with - not just yet detailed information about the things on this page, but also routes, maps, practical information (i.e. opening hours, phone numbers, websites, prices, etc), cultural insights, and much more? It has everything you want in a guide - but but a focus on budget and cultural travel! If you want to go into more depth and bring something on your trip, click here for more information about the book!) Songthaew - Songthaew is the most common mode of local transportation in Chiang Mai - it's like a converted pickup truck, with two rows of seats. This is how the locals travel. You just mark one in the street and tell the driver where you're going! You go to just about anywhere in town for 30 THB ($1 USD). Tuk-Tuk - A trip via tuk-tuk will probably be more expensive than a songthaew, as it is a direct service. You get around town for about 100 THB ($3 USD). Ride-Sharing - Although Uber is no longer available in Thailand, you can use a mobile app called Grab to request a private number. It works just like Uber, and is one of the most popular ways to travel around Southeast Asia. Just download the app, and go! Buses - There is no bus network in Chiang Mai (it's only tuk-tuks and songthaews), but there's a shuttle bus that connects the city to the airport. It is 40 THB ($1.25 USD) per person. The best time to visit Chiang Mai is between October-April, when temperatures are warm but not stifling. You still want to get a sweater in case the evenings cool off. The average daytime temperature is around 25°C, but can be as low as 15°C at night. If you're here in November, you'll see the Loi Krathong festivities. Please note, however, that this is the tourist season! In April and May it starts to warm up. Temperatures can reach up to 40°C and you want to pack light clothing and lots of sunscreen. If you're not used to such stifling heat, you might find it uncomfortable for sightseeing. The rainy season takes place from June to October, when temperatures cool, but humidity rises. Chiang Mai doesn't get as much rain as southern Thailand, but you'll still want to be prepared. It will rain for maybe an hour a day, and only rarely for days at a time. (Hey there! Hang on! Did you know that I also wrote a whole guide to Thailand filled with - not only even more detailed information about the things on this page, but also routes, maps, practical information (i.e. opening hours, phone numbers, websites, prices, etc), cultural insights, and much more? It has everything you want in a guide - but with a focus on budget and cultural travel! If you want to go into more depth and bring something on your trip, click here for more information about the book!) Chiang Mai is an incredibly safe place to backpack and travel. Petty theft (including bag snatching) is the most common form of crime in Chiang Mai. There are some common scams around, such as the motorcycle scam where sellers try to charge you for damage to their bike, but for the most part this is a safe place to travel. People are nice and helpful and you're unlikely to get in trouble. You read this post about travel scams to avoid so you don't fall for a while City. Overall I have rarely seen any problems here and I have been coming here for over ten years! Always trust your instincts. If a taxi driver seems shady, stop the taxi and get out. If your hotel is seedier than you thought, get out of there. Make copies of your personal documents, including your passport and ID.If you don't do it at home, don't do it if you're in Chiang Mai.The main advice I can offer is to buy good travel insurance. Travel insurance protects you from illness, injury, theft and cancellations. It's extensive protection in case something goes wrong. I never go on a trip without using it as I've used it many times in the past. You use the widget below to find the policy right for you: Below are my favorite companies to use when I travel to Chiang Mai. They are included here because they consistently deliver the best deals, provide world-class customer service and great value, and overall, outperform their competitors. They are always my starting point when I need to book a flight, hotel, tour, train or meeting people! Momondo - This is my favorite flight search engine because they search such a wide range of sites and airlines. I never book a flight without checking here first. Skyscanner - Skyscanner is another big flight search engine that many different airlines are looking for, including many of the budget airlines that miss larger sites. While I always start with Momondo, I also use this site as a way to compare prices. Airbnb - Airbnb is a great accommodation alternative for connecting with homeowners renting out their homes or apartments. The big cities have tons of offers! (If you're new to Airbnb, get $35 off your first stay!) Hostelworld - This is the best hostel accommodation site out there, with the largest inventory, best search interface, and widest availability. Agoda - Other than Hostelworld an Airbnb, Agoda is the best hotel accommodation site for Asia as it has the largest inventory and offers the best rates. If you want a guesthouse or hotel, book it through this website! Intrepid travel - If you want to take a group tour of South Asia, go with Intrepid Travel. They offer good small group tours that use local operators and leave a small ecological footprint. If you go on a tour with anyone, go with them. And as a reader of this site you get exclusive discounts if you click on the link! Grassroots Volunteering - For volunteering, Grassroots Volunteering compiles a list of good local volunteer organizations that keep the money within the community. Couchsurfing - This website allows you to stay on people's couches or extra rooms for free. It's a great way to save money while meeting the locals you're and outs of their city can tell. The site also includes events you attend to meet people (even if you're not staying with someone). World Nomads - I buy all my travel insurance from World Nomads. They have great customer service, competitive prices, and in-depth in-depth I've been using them since I started traveling in 2003. Don't leave the house without it! There is a lot of free information online, but do you want to spend days searching for information? Prob not! That's why there are guides. Although I have many free tips about Thailand, I also wrote an entire book that goes into detail about everything you need to plan a trip here on a budget! You get suggested routes, budgets, even more ways to save money, my favorites restaurants, maps, prices, practical information (i.e. phone numbers, websites, prices, safety advice, etc etc), and cultural tips. I give the insider view of Thailand that I got from living and traveling here! The downloadable guide can be used on your Kindle, iPad, phone or computer so you can have it with you when you go. Click here for more information about my book on Thailand! If you're heading to Chiang Mai, knowing what to grab and get the kind of backpack can be a little daunting. In this section, I give you my suggestion for the best travel backpack and tips on what to pack. What is the best backpack to travel around Chiang Mai? I recommend the REI Flash 45 Pack. It is light and comfortable, front loading, and fits perfectly into the overhead of an airplane bin. Size: 45-47L Belts: Thick and cushy with compression technology that pulls the load up and inwards the load so it doesn't feel so heavy. Features: Removable top cover, large front pocket, hydration compatible, contoured hip strap/ you want anything else, refer to my article on how to choose the best travel backpack for more tips and sign on how to get the right backpack, prices, and suggested packs. What to pack for Chiang MaiClothes1 jeans (heavy and not easily dried, but I like them; a good alternative is khaki pants)1 pair of shorts1 swimsuit6 T-shirts 1 long-sleeved T-shirt1 pairs of sneakers1 pairs of sneakers8 pairs of socks (I always end up losing half) 5 pairs of boxer shorts (I'm not a slips guy!) 1 toothbrush1 tube toothpaste1 razor1 package of toothpock1 small bottle of shower gel gel 1 odororil Medical Kit (safety is important!!!) VariousFemale Travel Packing List I'm not a woman, so I don't know what a woman wears, but Kristin Addis, our solo female travel guru, wrote this list as an addition to the basics above:Clothing1 swimsuit1 sarong1 pairs of stretchy jeans (they wash and dry easily)1 pair of leggings (if it's cold, they can go under your jeans, otherwise with a dress or shirt)2-3 long-sleeved tops2-3 T-shirts3-4 spaghetti tops1 light vestToiletries1 dry shampoo spray & talcum powder (keeps long hair fat-free between washes)1 hairbrushMakeup you useHair bands & hair clipsFeminine hygiene products (you choose to buy there too, but I prefer not to count on it, and most people have their products)For more information on packaging, check out these posts:The Beach, by Alex Garland This story about backpackers and their search for off-the-beaten path paradise is one many of us can relate to. After Richard and his quest to do something different in Thailand, he heads off the beaten path in hopes of an authentic experience, but finds that things aren't always what they seem. The book is part of adventure and share an exploration of why travelers are always looking for utopias and the consequences of that quest. It was turned into a film with Leonardo DiCaprio back in the 1990s. However, the book is a lot different (and much better). Focusing on the ideal of travel, I can't recommend the book enough. Sightseeing, by Rattawut Lapcharoensap This collection of masterful stories by award-winning author Rattawut Lapcharoensap is an absolute must-read when you visit Thailand. Each story has a different theme, whether it's a story of family ties, young romance, generational conflict, or the cultural shifts that occur in modern Thailand. You'll be hooked from the first story about a beachside motel owner who falls in love with a young American tourist. Anna and the King of Siam by Margaret Landon Anna Leonowens was a young English woman who inevitably changed the course of Thai history. She was hired in the 1860s by King Mongkut of Siam to help him communicate with foreign governments, and also to give the tutor to his children (and his favorite concubines). This book is about Leonowens' experiences, including the tutoring of the young Prince Chulalongkorn, who was so impressed by Western ideals that he became one of the country's most progressive kings. This book is beautifully written and gives some insight into pristine Thailand. Mad About the Mekong, by John Keay The author's story tells the journey of Francis Garnier, a historic 19th-century French explorer who sailed up the Mekong River in search of the back door to China. Keay describes the modern world of Vietnam's Mekong River up through Cambodia, Laos, Thailand, and Burma, while recreating Garnier's failed voyage that included two ships carrying naturalists, soldiers, artists, and geologists. It's fascinating to read. The Orchid House, by Lucinda Riley Julia Forrester, a concert pianist, spent much of her childhood in her grandfather's hotbed on the Wharton estate in England, where he tended to make exotic orchids. After the loss of her child and husband, Julia heads back to the hotbed where she meets Kit Crawford, heir to the estate. When they discover an old diary, Julia goes in search of her grandmother and discovers the truth about the love affair that almost destroyed the estate. This book jumps back and forth between the world of Wharton Park and Thailand during World War II, with plenty of twists to let you read! Bangkok 8, by John Burdett Bangkok 8 is an exciting detective based on the murder of a suave Marine sergeant under a bridge in Bangkok. There are only two witnesses: two cops, and within minutes one of them was killed. His partner, Sonchai Jitpleecheep, goes on a mission to find the killer. Find. is paired with a beautiful FBI agent (who inevitably wins his heart), and is soon launched into a sinister world of drugs, prostitution and corruption. This one keeps you on the edge of your seat. Private Dancer, by Stephen Leather Here's a small insight into Bangkok's wild go-go scene. Peter wanders into a go-go bar and meets the love of his life: Joy, a stunningly beautiful (and young) pole dancer. But Pete is soon launched into a life of drugs, sex and deceit when he discovers that his private dancer is not who she says she is. This book is a #1 bestseller in Thailand!
